READER 1: THE FOX

READER 2: THE STORK

: There once was a fox that lived in the forest.

: I'm the fox. I live in the forest.

: And a stork lived in the forest too.

: I'm the stork. I live in the forest too.

: One day, the fox invited the stork for dinner.

: My dear stork, come and have dinner with me.

: Thanks! You are so kind.

  : 身體強壯
Go, go, go. Go for a dinner you like so.

  : No, no, no. Maybe you don't want to know.

   : If they love you so.

: So the stork went to the dinner.

: At dinner, the stork was not happy.

: This soup is for you.

: The fox had given her nothing but soup.

: And he had put it in a big, flat dish.

: I don't think I can eat this soup. My beak is too long.

: The soup kept falling out of her long beak.

: The stork couldn't eat the soup.

: I'm sorry. You look so silly.

: The fox laughed and ate all his soup.

: But not the stork.

: My friend, thanks for the dinner. Why don't you come to my house? I make good soup too.

: That will be nice. I would love to. Thank you!

  : Go, go, go!
Go for a dinner you like so.

  : No, no, no.
Maybe you don't want to know.

   : If they love you so.

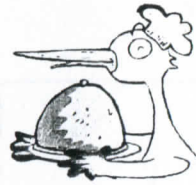

: The next day, the stork made soup for the fox.

: The fox came to dinner.

: I love soup.

: When the fox smelled the soup,
he couldn't wait to eat it.

: This is for you. Enjoy it!

: I'm hungry. Let's eat!

: But the fox couldn't eat the soup.

: The stork had put it in a tall cup.

: The fox couldn't reach the soup inside.

: I don't think I can eat the soup.

: I'm very sorry. But this is the same as what you did to me last time.

: The fox just sat there, hungry.

: But could do nothing.

: *Go, go, go! Go for a dinner you like so.
No, no, no. Maybe you don't want to know.
If you're nice to me, oh,
And I'll love you so.*

: People will treat us—

: The way we treat them.

: Be nice to your friends!
